Ulysses, Jr., and Jesse In a Land of Sunshine and Flowers. [Special Correspondence.]

SANTIAGO, Cal., Nov. 1. - Here within a dozen miles of the Mexican line the sons of Ex-President Grant and their families are living, while their mother makes her home with them during the winter season.

Last winter the wife of U. S. Grant, Jr., who has wealth in her own right, bought one of the finest mansions in the city, a three story brick structure of the Queen Anne style of architecture, and has since dwelt therein. It is situated upon a hill in the rear of the city, about a mile from the shore of the beautiful bay, and commands one of the loveliest views in the world.

The land gradually slopes down to the water, covered with the buildings of a modern and progressive city that emerged from its tropical torpor in the memorable time known as "the boom." Long wharves jut out into the "land locked bay," entered by Cabrillo in 1542 and pronounced "good." Here are ships from various parts of the world unloading their cargoes, and the busy ferryboat plies back and forth between the city and the peninsula of Coronado, where one of the most famous hotels in the country occupies an unrivaled position, with the ocean at its feet and purple veiled mountains in the background. On the right hand the high promontory of Point Loma protects the opening to the harbor, with a light-

HOME OF ULYSSES S. GRANT, JR. house at the end. Looking south, or to the left, peak after peak of the coast range rises against the cloudless sky, and back of them Table mountain, 60 miles away in Lower California, is plainly seen.

The house has a history connected with "the boom." It was built for a young banker, whose rapidly acquired fortune vanished as quickly as it came, and he was forced to give up his home. The finishing of the interior is very beantiful. A lawn surrounds the house, in which fan palm trees are growing. In the rear is a rose garden containing many choice varieties of the "queen of flowers." Mrs. Grant remained with her son Ulysses until her departure for the east this summer to meet her daughter, Mrs. Sartoris.

Jesse Grant has just moved into a new house farther back on the hill. It is a singularly plain building, partly colonial, painted yellow and standing

Both families live very quietly, not mixing in San Diego society. They are all plain in manner and appearance, The gentlemen bunt a great deal, quail and ducks being plentiful in the country roundabout. They came to this remote spot in order to escape rigorous winters and appear to be content with an unconventional life in a land of sunshine and flowers.

THE CODE OF HONOR.

A Sense of Humor Has Stopped Many a Sanguinary Contest. (Special Correspondence.)

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 1 .- The proposition made by City Editor Ruebesamen of the Chicago Abend Post to fight a duel with City Editor J. P. Stepnes of The Freie Presse of the same city and then another one with City Editor Seldman, also of The Freie Presse, because of articles printed in that paper alleging mismanagment of the German Press club, seems funny enough, even in this held full sway. It is a pity that the challenged men did not have enough of the saving sense of humor to reply to the challenges in such a manner as to turn the wrath of the challenger into merriment and so add more to the gayety of the nations than has already been contributed.

Notwithstanding the fact that it was so long considered in New Orleans that the duello was the only practicable and honorable way of settling certain sorts of differences the light touch of humorous treatment has in the past stopped more than one personal encounter. Bernard Marigny, in his day one of the most accomplished duelists in New Orleans, a creole gentleman, figured in two of these episodes.

In the first of these it was he who stopped the fight. Among his friends Telephone 488, - - - Topcka. was one-Tissier by name-who was a great bean, and of course most dainty Track and road-shoeing a specialty. and fastidious in his dress. Marigny was fond of teasing Tissier, and when the two met would often throw up his hands, strike an attitude and exclaim: "How much I admire you! What a dandy you are!" This happened once too often, and Tissier, though well aware that he was not half so good a marksman as Marigny, challenged the latter to fight. The challenge was accepted and pistols named as the weapons. The men had been placed facing each other at the old dueling ground known as The Oaks Suddenly Marigny dropped his pistol, his eye rolled in mock admiration, and his hands went up.

"How I admire him!" he said sadly.

'And must I then kill him?" Tissier could not keep from laughing, although he felt solemn enough at the moment, for he fully expected to be killd. There was no duel, and the two men, impulsive, like all creoles, embracsd instead of shooting each other, and senewing their old friendship were ever

ifter devoted comrades. CHARLES APPLEBEE
